

Description:

Stokvel Web application and responsive. The Stockvell members share a common savings goal, such as a December party, New Year's Eve, or a wedding, or investing in real estate or the stock market. For example, a group of young professionals may get together and save in a stokvel to buy rental properties. Stokvels are invitational clubs of at least two or more people that act as credit unions or rotating savings systems, for example in South Africa, where members contribute fixed sums to a central fund on a weekly, bi-weekly or monthly basis. Just as some people exercise more when they have a workout buddy, others find it easier to save when they do so as a group. Getting started If you have several friends, colleagues, or neighbors who share the same savings goal and want to start a Stockvell, hold an initial meeting where you agree on the goal, the number of members, and the amount of your monthly contribution. There is no fixed number of people in a stokvel, which can have as few as 5 members or as many as 100. I have listed below in details the details. It has to be very simple with the possibility to continue the development later.
